PROFESSIONAL OVERVIEW

As Training Administrator for United Safety Professionals, Valerie Wakefield brings decades of experience in occupational health and safety, business management, training, and client service. Valerie co-founded Occupational Health and Safety Associates in 2002 and later founded United Alliance Services, serving as its principal owner and CEO. Through these roles, she helped develop and grow an occupational health and safety organization providing consulting, training, emergency planning, and industrial hygiene services to public and private-sector clients throughout the Northeast.

Valerie's background combines business leadership with practical occupational health and safety experience. During her tenure in executive leadership, she oversaw multidisciplinary professional staff and the delivery of services across construction, general industry, healthcare, dental, and other workplace environments. Her earlier career as a dental hygienist also provided firsthand experience with healthcare operations and OSHA requirements applicable to medical and dental workplaces.

Today, Valerie applies her extensive organizational knowledge and training experience to support United Safety Professionals' training operations and program administration. Her long-standing familiarity with the organization, its clients, and its safety and health services provides continuity between the company's history and its current operations, while her experience as an instructor and administrator supports the effective coordination and delivery of workforce safety training.
